The allegations made by anonymous administrative staff ranged from victimisation and isolation of certain staff members, racism, inaction on allegations of misappropriation of funds, bypassing established procedures in hiring certain staff members as well as lack of respect for the executive director and directors in the Ministry of Higher Education amongst others. Confidante has learnt that the university's human resource department could not fully investigate the allegations as staff members preferred to remain anonymous and failed to provide evidence. According to a council submission dated June 8 prepared by HR director Riette Duvenhage, the council approved RemCo's recommendation made on June 5 to dismiss all allegations.
