PREFACE

The International Congress on the Teaching of Human Rights, organized by UNESCO in Vienna, Austria, in 1978, recommended that the Organization should be a clearing-house for information concerning human rights teaching and research. Nine years later, the International Congress on Human Rights Teaching, Information and Documentation (Malta, 1987) confirmed this recommendation and concluded that UNESCO should provide information on materials, specialized institutions and bibliographies related to human rights teaching and research.

This led to the preparation of the first edition of the World Directory of Human Rights Research and Training Institutions which was published in 1987 in collaboration with the Canadian Human Rights Foundation. The Directory was considered to be a useful means of enhancing cooperation among the institutions working for the advancement of human rights through education and research. It was therefore decided to publish the Directory on a regular basis.

Increasingly, the importance of training, research and the dissemination of information in the field of human rights was acknowledged. This led to a call by the International Congress on Education for Human Rights and Democracy (Montreal, 1993) for "identification, creation and strengthening of national, regional and international research centres and clearing-houses on human rights information". That same year, the World Conference on Human Rights in Vienna considered that "human rights education, training and public information are essential for the promotion and achievement of stable and harmonious relations among communities and for fostering mutual understanding, tolerance and peace" (Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, Part II, para. 78).

The present edition of the Directory, containing updated and revised information, is dedicated to the tenth anniversary of the World Conference on Human Rights. The Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action underlines the universality, indivisibility, interdependence and interrelation of all human rights – civil, cultural, economic, political and social. It proclaims that "the international community must treat human rights globally, in a fair and equal manner, on the same footing, and with the same emphasis. While the significance of national and regional particularities and various historical, cultural and religious backgrounds must be borne in mind, it is the duty of States, regardless of their political, economic and cultural systems, to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms" (Part I, para.5).

The recent developments in the field of human rights have confirmed the necessity for a stronger partnership among all those who are working for the advancement of human rights, especially in order to meet new challenges and threats to human rights, such as poverty, terrorism, deterioration of the environment, etc. It is in this spirit that we propose this sixth edition of the World Directory.

UNESCO considers that human rights research and training institutions are important and reliable partners in the implementation of its programmes. The Organization cooperates closely with its partners within the United Nations system, first and foremost with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) with which a Memorandum of Understanding was signed in February 2003. According to the Memorandum, OHCHR and UNESCO are committed to join efforts in the realization of activities in the field of human rights and democracy, in particular those aimed at the implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (1993), the Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004); the Declaration and Plan of Action of the World Conference Against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance (2001); the UN Millennium Declaration and the Dakar Framework for Action adopted by the World Education Forum in 2000. UNESCO and OHCHR are also resolved to cooperate in planning and implementing specific activities linked with human rights education, and research.

It should be recalled that the final report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (document A/53/372 of 11 September 1998) states that provisions concerning human rights education and public information, will, over the coming years, require stronger involvement on the part of the international community and strengthening of the partnerships between governmental and non-governmental actors and between all those who work for human rights. It is imperative that the importance of human rights education and public information as major investments towards a just and peaceful society be fully understood and valued. Ultimately, the effective promotion and protection of all human rights for all people is not possible without a global human rights culture. Education and information are major tools to create such a culture.

This edition of the World Directory was prepared, as were the previous ones, by the Social and Human Sciences Documentation Centre and the Division of Human Rights. It was done with the hope that the publication will contribute to further strengthen collaboration between human rights institutions and increase their contribution to the advancement of human rights. It should facilitate the creation of networks of research and training institutions in order to work for further progress in the field of human rights, promoting the right to human rights education as a human right and as an integral part of education. We are grateful to the institutions who assisted in preparing this edition.

Despite all our efforts, the information contained in this publication may not be exhaustive and some omissions and errors may still appear. We would be grateful for any suggestions for improvement, modifications, or further data. This should be sent to the following address (the questionnaire used for the survey is available at the end of the Directory):
